

Invocation to Odin (as patron)

Odin! One Eyed! You hung for 9 days on Yggdrasil in your quest for knowledge of the runes. You gave your eye to Mimir's well in your quest for the knowledge of the future. You sit in your high seat so that you can see all. You send out your ravens Hugin and Munin so you can hear what is happening throughout the worlds. You are on an endless quest for knowledge. You came to me in my quest for knowledge, and I thank you for that.

Come, join me, aide me, and guide me in my works this evening!

Odin! Accept my Sacrifice! (beer)

Invocation of Odin for Yule

Odin!

One Eyed!

You gave your eye to Mimir's well so you could gain the knowledge he possessed. You rode Ygg for nine days from the end of a rope, with a spear cut into your side as you searched for the knowledge of the runes. You sit in Hlidskjalf, your high seat in which you can see all.

Tonight, you are the leader of the wild hunt. You lead the specters of men past in the hunt of the wild boar. You ride at the head on the back of Loki's magnificent son and take with you all who stand in your way. But, those that join you in the hunt are rewarded handsomely.

Let us not stand in your way. Let us join you in your hunt! Let us find that boar!

Odin, on this the shortest day of the year, let us join you, and join your hunt!

We give this {name beverage} to you!

Odin, Accept our Sacrifice!